Tax Wealth, not Poverty.

Debate upon the tariff was begun last week in the House by Mr. Payne. He and his associates have many things to explain.

Why is tea to be taxed eight and nine cents a pound? Wayne MacVeigh has told Mr. Payne, in a letter worthy of the lofty idealism of an austere past, that many rich men would prefer to pay taxes that would rob them of no luxury rather than see increasing burdens laid upon "those less fortunate brothers whose lives are passed in that increasing calculation of sorrow where hard toil sometimes provides—and some times fails to provide—sufficient daily bread." Why not leave tea free and make the inheritance tax, as Mr. Carnegie suggests, "good and stiff"?

Why leave upon sugar a tariff of nearly two cents a pound, which Mr. MacVeigh truly calls infamous, "as it often takes from the laboring man more than from the richest multi-millionaire? Why not make sugar free, saving $10 or more a year for a poor man with a numerous brood, and get revenue by a constitutional graduated income tax? Why, as Mr. MacVeigh asks, exempt from proper taxation the "colossal incomes and colossal accumulations" of surplus wealth?

Why raise the tariff rates on machine-knit stockings, gloves and a dozen other articles of the commonest use? Why keep the wool rates nearly at the preposterous height which, as Franklin Pierce shows, compels poor men to shiver in shoddy and cotton in our bitter winds?

Will not the maximum and minimum provision, as suggested when the bill was reported, in practice rob the consumer? The maximum rate must be enforced against Brazil because she has an export coffee duty. That would mean nearly a cent a pound tax upon three fourths of all the coffee we get. The "retaliation" would be upon the American people. It has been suggested that we might be obliged to use the maximum rate even against our best customer, Great Britain.

So far as the Payne bill does reduce the tariff upon important staples, as in the steel, wood and paper schedules, it is a short step in the right direction. But it leaves tariff rates still far beyond defensible limits. It perpetuates the plundering of the consumer. It is, as the minority report says, "sectional and prohibitive." It leaves the inevitable great battle for tariff reform and uncertainty still hanging over the business community. It is but a step to public opinion.

Yet clear and plain lies the path of fiscal common sense. Tax wealth, not poverty.

Got 'Em at Last.

Green R. Keller, the senior editor of the Carlisle Mercury, has got 'em at last—snakes? no, wuser and more of 'em—rats! Poor Green, one of the best that ever happened, it's sad.

We have at times thought that the religious sputts made by our dear brother occasionally that he had crossed the line and had landed in the right path, but one cannot always tell. It is said that he began to stumble back into the old ways when local option hit his town—was all right until they voted the canteen in and sidetracked the growler.

His brother editors would not be so shocked if it was snakes, white elephants, or even fishing worms that were troubling him, but for them to think that it is the pestiferous rats makes them quiver in their shoes for poor Keller, who is one of the brightest, jolliest and all-round good fellows in Kentucky.

He has gone so far as to issue a proclamation setting forth May 17 as "rat killing day" in Nicholas. To save our noble Keller to his friends we pray you, Nicholas county people to rid your county of these varmints.

Punishment for Kidnapers.

The kidnaping of a child always prompts a demand for drastic laws for the punishment of kidnapers, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The law of Pennsylvania fixes the maximum penalty for kidnaping at life imprisonment, and is a good law. Certainly it would be unwise to provide capital punishment, as has been suggested within a few days. Undoubtedly miscreants who thus play with life and death and bring the furies to the door of the parents of the stolen child deserve no clemency. They should be outlawed then blotted from the earth's activities, but capital punishment would probably not be more efficacious in preventing kidnaping, and it would almost assure the death of the kidnapped in case of pursuit and threatened capture of the criminals. The parents of the kidnapped in this and in all other cases play, to a certain extent, at cross purposes with the State and the police, who naturally are eager to pay any price at command to protect the criminals, to thwart the police and the cause of justice, and to do anything under heaven if they may but receive their own back safe and sound. This is human nature, and every father and mother would do likewise. The interests of the State, which are the interests of all other fathers and mothers and their children, require above all things, that the criminals shall be caught at all hazards. One of the chief objects is, of course, to retrieve the boy alive and well, but a greater object is to seize and to punish the vile criminals. The safety of other families makes it imperative that kidnapers shall never escape with their booty, and that the most desperate criminals will always avoid the crime, even when it is suggested, because it is too hazardous.

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherrybark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, hang-on, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Benedict Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine: "In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity. Golden Medical Discovery enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings and old sores, or ulcers. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it."
